Watch Traffic On Labor Day Week-End

The Governor's Highway Safety Committee and the Virginia State Police are making a special plea to all those who will use the State's highways during the dangerous Labor Day week-end, E. H. Williams, Jr., the Committee's Executive Director, announced today.

With Virginia's excellent record of 147 seriously in danger, the two agencies are reminding both drivers and pedestrians that highway deaths for last Labor Day week-end ran to 15, nearly twice as many as have occurred during the holiday weekends of past years. Mr. Williams stated also that preliminary figures showed 291 traffic deaths for the first six months of 1948 as compared with 329 for the same portion of 1947 with the 1948 figures subject certainly to some upward revision due to late reports. He also expressed the fear that this year will see no reduction in highway deaths if the present trend continues, as fatalities rise sharply during the fall and winter months.

With traffic volumes exceeding those of last year by some 10 per cent, the utmost caution is necessary during the always - dangerous holiday period and officials of both agencies listed the following safety tips:

1. Be sure that your automobile is in good mechanical condition before your trip.

2. Start your trip a little earlier so there will be no temptation to speed. The same should be true for your return trip.

3. Observe traffic signs, obey laws, and remember others have their rights.

4. Don't drive if you have had anything to drink, or are tired.

5. Keep your attention on your driving and pull off the road to admire scenery.

6. Don't cut in and out of heavy traffic. Wait until it is safe to pass.

7. If you are a pedestrian, remember traffic is unusually heavy.

Little Pigs Stunted By Worm Infestation

Tests Show Marked Retarding of Growth

Seldom are farmers inclined to argue with scientists, livestock specialists and others who keep warning that internal parasites are harmful to swine. Occasionally, however, a farmer will pose the question: "How much injury is caused by worm infestation?"

The answer to that question is provided in tests conducted by the bureau of animal industry to determine how much the growth of pigs is retarded by roundworms (ascarids).

Growth of this pig will be determined largely by number of worms present.

In carrying out the experiment, the bureau used eight litter-mate pigs eight weeks old, feeding four of them infective roundworm eggs. The other four, which served as controls, received no worm eggs.

After four months all eight pigs were weighed, killed and examined for roundworms. None were found in the control pigs, but the other four harbored 109, 39, 20 and 12, respectively.

Growth of the four pigs that had roundworms at autopsy was less rapid than the four controls. The pig with 109 worms weighed 8.7 pounds less than at the time it was fed the worm eggs; its control litter-mate gained 96 pounds.

The pig with 39 roundworms gained only 48 per cent as much as its control; the one with 20 roundworms, only 55 per cent as much as its control. The growth of the pig with only 12 roundworms was not retarded very much; it weighed nearly as much as its control-mate.

Research to Intensify Winter in Meat Tests

Freezing is one of the oldest ways of preserving meat. It is also one of the newest, the U. S. department of agriculture points out.

In old-time freezing there was not much that could be done about the process. It was a winter method depending on continued cold. A mid-winter or early-spring thaw might spoil a meat supply intended to last for additional weeks or months. This was true whether the meat was wild game brought in by hunters or was from domestic animals.

Modern freezing is still so new that there is a good deal to be learned about it.

This is the purpose of an expansion of studies of meat freezing and curing made possible under the research and marketing act. A first step will be to survey freezing and curing methods now in use. Samples of meats typical of these methods of preservation will be assembled and compared for quality and nutritive value. Next, the experimenters will try first to duplicate, then improve the methods which the survey and comparison work indicate are most effective.

The bureau of animal industry will have equipment that can improve on even the most severe winter weather. It will be able to freeze meat at 100 degrees below zero if that proves desirable.

Quality Cream Boosts Returns to Dairymen

Production of high quality cream will pay dividends to the dairymen.

A few suggestions for assuring top production: Protect separator from rust; rinse with chlorine solution before using; wash with powder immediately after each separation; cool cream immediately; separate milk immediately after straining; cool cream rapidly and thoroughly before mixing with older cream; keep containers covered from the time the milk is strained into cans until it reaches the receiving vat; strain milk in milk room or milk house, not in the barn; cover cans tightly and place in cooler with cold circulating water.

Several Sheep Ailments Are Caused by Worms

Several ailments of sheep, including "nodular disease," "stomach worm disease" and "black scours," are caused by worms. Main attack by successful sheep men, therefore, is directed against development or reproduction of the offending worms. While most of the eggs and young worms of these parasites are destroyed in winter, sheep must be treated to prevent entry of worms into the intestinal tract.

Uncle Sam Says

Regardless of the heat wave, you can't afford to be lazy about your future, because the future holds for you what you hold for the future. Ben Franklin didn't make this statement, but any United States Savings Bonds payroll saver who works with you could claim this bit of advice as his or her own. All he has to do is to sign his name once on the card for the United States Savings Bonds payroll savings plan. His employer does all the rest. Three dollars saved through the payroll savings plan get Mr. Summertime Lazybones four dollars 10 years hence.
